

NFL DRAFT TEAM EVALUATIONS

2009 DRAFT		TAMPA BAY BUCCANEERS C-
PICK NO.	PLAYER	COMMENTS	POS	HEIGHT	WEIGHT	SCHOOL
17	JOSH FREEMAN	The talent and potential of this young man keep the BUCS out of the cellar in my DRAFT Grades, but not by much. With some work and patience FREEMAN has big upside. He is massive, with a monster arm and a competitive nature. All he needs is a QB guru to nurture him. It's on the BUCS coaching staff now.	QB	6'6	250	KANSAS STATE
81	ROY MILLER	This is a better Pick than many folks think. MILLER really got serious as a senior and showed a high motor along with natural strength and decent mobility. He should play a lot, if not start, by mid-season 2009.	DT	6'2	312	TEXAS
117	KYLE MOORE	This is a Round too high for my taste. MOORE has physical gifts, but I would still label him an underachiever at this point. He needs to get serious and take his game to the next level or he will just be a hanger-on in the NFL. He also needs to add weight.	DE	6'5	272	SOTHERN CAL
155	XAVIER FULTON	If his shoulders are both sound he has potential as a finesse RT. We won't know for a couple of seasons what his potential really is. This is a major coaching project who will require time and patience. OK value at this slot.	OT	6'4	300	ILLINOIS
217	E. J. BIGGERS	Yes, I was aware of this player, but did not rate him as close to Draftable. I will bet you that some scout in the Tampa organization fell in love with him, while watching tape of DELMAS in action. This is a reach and even in R7 that's not a good thing for a rebuilding team.	CB	5'11	185	WESTERN MICHIGAN
223	SAMMIE STROUGHTER	Now this is a very high value Pick. When healthy SAMMIE is an explosive return man and a home run threat as a receiver. He will make a very dangerous slot receiver because of his quickness and explosion. He is this year's version of last year's R2 selection DEXTER JACKSON. Great Pick this late.	WR/RS	5'9	185	OREGON STATE

Just barely avoided a D grade, but for seemingly to have finally landed a Franchise QB in FREEMAN. Still didn't get enough talent overall considering all the veteran players they purged from the roster after the 2008 season was over. Not what I would call a shining effort by new GM MARK DOMINIK and his Personnel people. They to, better have a great deal of success in signing some meaningful RFA talent to fill out the bottom of their roster.