

NFL DRAFT TEAM EVALUATIONS

2009 DRAFT		BALTIMORE RAVENS C
PICK NO.	PLAYER	COMMENTS	POS	HEIGHT	WEIGHT	SCHOOL
23	MICHAEL OHER	This team had no right to expect to be able to land OHER this late in the First Round...Merry Christmas RAVENS' fans. He should be in the starting line-up come September. He and GAITHERS give them a set of huge, talented starters for a decade.	OT	6'5	310	OLE MISS
57	PAUL KRUGER	Every year they try to find a SUGGS/THOMAS hybrid E/LB and KRUGER is their 2009 version of same. He's a hard working tough guy, but I think this is a reach and could end up more like their DAN CODY Pick a few years ago.	E/LB	6'4	265	UTAH
88	LaDARIUS WEBB	I like this guy and his selection here. He would have been gone had they tried to wait another Round and he will fit their style of D. He has cover skills, closing speed and toughness for his size. That should be a good fit as they rebuild their CB position.	CB	5'10	180	NICHOLLS STATE
137	JASON PHILLIPS	I am assuming they are comfortable that his knee will be fine after surgery. If so he is another player who fits their style of play. He is a hard working, high effort guy with more savvy than talent, but he is more athletic than he is given credit for. He will also shine on Special Teams for them.	ILB	6'1	239	TCU
149	DAVON DREW	I am fascinated by this ex-QB's potential. I guess OZZIE is as well. He will definitely need time to develop, but with HEAP & SMITH around they can afford to work with him for a couple of seasons. Might have been a Round too high, but time will tell.	TE	6'4	255	EAST CAROLINA
185	CEDRIC PEERMAN	Can you say, big time steal?! No way he should have still been here. He is a high character, high motor guy who gives them a quickness and burst dimension they do not have right now at RB. He also catches well out in space. In a RB by committee approach like theirs, he will be a great fit.	RB	5'9	215	VIRGINIA

This is a solid C DRAFT. There are no glaring reaches, but rather the taking of solid productive players at positions of need. OZZIE is also very careful to Draft players who will fit their schemes. No square pegs in round holes on his watch. This is not a group to jump up and down about, but then again it should not cause a gnashing of teeth either.